

Get to know the designer: Marcia John

Marcia John studied at the University for the Creative Arts, where she specialised in hand-dyed and hand-woven textiles.

Seizing every opportunity to challenge her understanding of material, patterns and structure, Marcia takes inspiration from the natural environment.

Marcia's cultural heritage allows for an infusion and appreciation of bold hues and the use of non-conventional materials. Colour and structure is an integral facet of her design practice.

Most of Marcia's work consists of natural yarns, including recycled material stock, which provides immense scope for endless innovation and creativity. Her designs are best suited for any interior spaces such as wall hangings or art pieces.

<https://marciabjohn.com/>

Get to know the designer: Ed Niles

Ed Niles trained at the Royal College of Art as a digital textile and graphic designer. Ed works with analogue and digital processes. Colour, materiality and treatment are key elements of his practice.

Besides art & design, science has always been his first love. Textiles as a medium provides the vehicle for Ed's journey into a limitless route for exploration.

Developing hybrid contemporary motifs and designs, Ed explores these through cultural and wider references throughout his work.