SCHIAPARELLI: FASHION

BECOMES ART

V&A

Introduction

Elsa Schiaparelli (1890 – 1973) was one of the world's most radical fashion designers. Her couture house, the most discussed of interwar Paris, redefined standards of style and perceptions of beauty in the 20th century. At the same time, her impact extended beyond fashion and across the cities of Paris, London and New York from the late 1920s until her retirement in 1954. Operating at the centre of Europe's creative avant-garde, she positioned her work in direct dialogue with fine art, photography, graphic design, theatre and film.

This five-week course will chart the craft and cultural impact of this innovative couturier and will be taught by V&A curators, independent scholars and archivists who will draw upon their own original research. The course will cover celebrated, yet little-seen garments, accessories and jewellery from the history of fashion, including objects in the museum's own collections. You will learn about Schiaparelli's creative collaborations with artists including Salvador Dalí and Jean Cocteau as well as her costumes for stage and screen worn by performers such as Mae West and Zsa Zsa Gabor. Other sessions will spotlight the London branch of Schiaparelli and her dynamic and independent clients from Josephine Baker to Marlene Dietrich. You will also gain an exclusive insight into exhibition-making at the V&A, hearing about the creative process behind Schiaparelli: Fashion Becomes Art.

Information
